Investing in Northwest Churches: The Northwest Baptist Revolving Fund

A Mission of Faith and Growth

For many mission churches, financing an initial building program can be a significant challenge. To help churches secure loans when traditional funding sources aren't available, the Northwest Baptist Home Mission established the Northwest Baptist Revolving Fund in 1958.

This fund provides financial assistance for church building projects, ensuring that new and growing congregations have a place to worship and serve their communities. The Board of Trustees oversees the issuance of Revolving Fund Promissory Notes as an ongoing source of funding for these loans. Because no sales commissions or brokerage fees are paid, 100% of the proceeds go directly to supporting church construction.

How the Revolving Fund Works

- Investors can contribute in units or multiples of $500.
- Each investor receives a promissory note outlining the interest rate and repayment terms.
- The Revolving Fund is separate from other mission operating funds and is managed under policies approved by the Board.
- No earnings benefit private individuals; however, surplus funds may be transferred to the Mission General Fund if the Fund Balance remains above 11% of total assets.

An Opportunity of Faith

This opportunity is extended to members, supporters, and their families who share a vision for expanding the Lord's work in the Northwest. Investing in the Revolving Fund is more than a financial decision—it's an act of faith, enabling new churches to establish their presence and minister effectively.

Each loan is carefully vetted, ensuring the borrowing church has a sustainable repayment plan. Loans are secured by a deed of trust or mortgage, and churches are required to maintain adequate insurance. While the Fund accommodates temporary financial hardships, no loan has ever defaulted since its inception.

Your Role in Church Growth

Since 1958, hundreds of investors have helped provide over $12 million in building loans to 90+ churches in the Northwest. Join us in building churches and strengthening ministries—one investment at a time.
